Welcome Back, it's been a long two years!

Catching up and moving on from COVID-19

Who knew that 2020 would be the year everything in tourism would change? The shutdown occurred in March, leaving everyone wondering how it would end for our tourism economy. The uncertainty of the pandemic and the mandated shutdowns to stop the spread impacted tourism globally. It highlighted just how fragile the tourism industry is and how important it is to the world economy. Locally, there was a greater fear tourism would decline by more than 30%, making the actual decline of 21.1% look like a gift. While Cape May County saw the smallest percentage decline, in real dollars the loss in tourism direct spending was $1.54 billion.

As we recover and, in some cases, surpass pre-Covid tourism records, we are looking at a very different customer, workforce, and business model. Heading into 2022, the labor shortage and supply chain interruption will continue to impact our businesses, inflation will impact businesses and visitors. Reports of a growing economy are not convincing families as they feel the crunch in everyday expenses.

The three biggest components of a household budget are housing, gasoline and food they account for 63% of the average household budget and continue to be the largest contributors to inflation, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. These costs will only further the impact on discretionary spending. Savings are dwindling as family look for ways to keep up with rising costs forcing some to axe the family vacation altogether. Not exactly what we want to hear as we try to move past the pandemic.

After two years of travel restrictions, vacation trends have changed, being just satisfied with your vacation experience isn't enough. Today's traveler is in pursuit of adventure, experiential, and authentic vacations. The good news is, many have saved over the past two years planning to take that big "bucket list" vacation they have been dreaming about for years, or maybe just while quarantining. For others, vacation plans mean reuniting with families and friends to rekindle old and make new memories.

Travelers are willing and ready but there are other concerns that can change their plans. New variants are causing about 20% of travelers to stay at home again this year. International conflicts, inflation and rising fuel costs are cited as impacting traveler's plans for 2022. Flexibility is needed for a variety of reasons. Baby Boomers are reluctant to book vacations and the close-to-home destinations drive vacation is more appealing. The purchase of travel insurance is on the rise and flexibility to cancel and or move travel dates is a serious concern.

The rising cost of airfare has pushed many to consider close to home vacations and Cape May County can deliver on unique and authentic vacations close-to-home in many ways. The charm and attraction of the county is based on authenticity. The absence of chain hotels, restaurants and retail are all part of the cultural trend in travel. Hometown, homespun and homemade are what travelers are seeking in a vacation experience. Cape May County oozes local charm throughout all 16 municipalities. It is much more than beaches that attract visitors to the Jersey

Cape. Museums and historic attractions connect the county's rich heritage back 330 years and beyond. Making our history their history connects the dots between what was happening in Cape May County compared to what was happening nationally. Natural areas fit well into the trends and offers outdoor activities, not to mention lots of social distancing opportunities, for those who feel safer in less crowded areas. Birding is a huge attraction, along with hiking, biking and outdoor sports.

Tourism was most affected by the Covid-19 pandemic, impacting economies, livelihoods, public services and opportunities on all continents. The U.S. experienced the biggest tourism revenue loss due to the pandemic, losing $147.245 billion in the first ten months of 2020. The global economy lost an estimated $4 trillion over 2020 and 2021. International tourism and its closely linked sectors suffered an estimated loss of $2.4 trillion in 2020 due to direct and indirect impacts in international tourist arrivals.

Cape May County has weathered hurricanes, nor'easters, beach erosions and rainy summer weekends and still came out ahead with steady annual increases in direct tourism spending. Nothing can compare to the impact the County tourism industry experienced from COVID-19. We were hitting record numbers in tourism direct spending and our resorts were making the 'best of' lists in prestigious publication polling. The Jersey Cape was the 'it' destination to go for summer vacationers. A publicity audit for Cape May County found 43 articles written over the past year with a conservative PR value of $2 million.

Recovery is not enough, it won't makeup what was lost in 2020. One of the most perishable products in the tourism industry is the room night, when lost it can never be made up. The battle now is to find ways to expand the season in an attempt to recoup what was lost.

The Jersey Cape is the "comeback kid" with a recover rate of 96%, one year after the worst decline in tourism spending on record. Economic impact numbers dating back to 1994, reported the county surpassed $2 billion in tourism expenditures. Cape May County experienced slow but steady growth over the years with hitting nearly $7 billion in 2019. The only year Cape May County experienced a loss in tourism revenue was 2020, and fortunately, that was short lived. Included in this report is the 2020 economic impact data and the 2021 data just released.

Cape May and Atlantic Counties are the 'big dogs' in the state and lead all other counties in tourism expenditures. The pandemic clearly showed the importance of beach tourism with the four beach counties generating 54.6% of the total statewide direct tourism spending in 2020. Visitation to the State was down 27.2%, with a loss of 31.6 million visitors. Cape May County lost 19.7% of visitors or 2 million people, compared to 2019. Cape May County's visitors represented 9.6% of all visitors to New Jersey, nearly 1 in every 10 people who came to the state, visited the Jersey Cape for vacation in 2020.

The economic impact data for 2020 shows the impact of COVID-19, the county experienced a 21.1% loss. With a recovery rate of 96%, it will not recoup what was lost in 2020. It is said one of the most perishable things in the tourism industry is the room night, when lost it can never be made up. You can rent a room only one night, when it's not rented you never get it back.

Recovery from the pandemic in the lodging sector was reached in mid-2021, the loss in occupancy tax in 2020 of $344.9 million was recouped by July 2021 and by August surpassed the 2019 amount. Occupancy tax is a metric used to measure overnight stays. The average overnight visitor to Cape May County spends $374 per overnight stay, per person. The average daily spend is $165 per day, per person, the highest daily rate statewide. Recovery in lodging was well in advance of what the experts were predicting. Some segments of the tourism industry such as air travel continue to struggle to recover with many experts not expecting a return to pre-2019 level until 2023, with experts predicting that 63% of international travel will fully return in 2024 or later. Cape May County saw a 96% recovery in 2021.

The unintended consequences of the pandemic travel trends have changed post-COVID, and many of the changes will work well for Cape May County. Visitor trends such as road trips and outdoor experiences will give us an advantage as we move into the 2022 season. The impact of the pandemic was devastating to the entire tourism industry in New Jersey with a loss of 36.8% in direct tourism expenditures. Cape May County experienced the lowest percentage loss in tourism direct spending statewide, down 21.1% compared to 2019, however, that was not good news. The actual loss in dollars is a very different story, Cape May County saw a decline of $1.54 billion in direct tourism spending during the height of the pandemic, the second largest hit in New Jersey, after Atlantic County that saw a 37.7% loss due to the COVID restrictions that greatly impacted the gaming industry.

Cape May County went from $6904.9 in 2019 to $5448.2 in 2020, this knocked us back to 2013 levels in direct tourism spending (2013 - $5.519 billion), 7 years of growth evaporated in 2020. Visitation to the Jersey Cape was down 19.7%, going from a record 10.2 million visitors to 8.2 million in 2020, the second highest visitor level after Atlantic County. Atlantic County nearly doubled the number of visitors to Cape May County, yet generated less in actual tourism spending, according to the Tourism Economics report. However, nearly 30% (29.3%) of the visitors to New Jersey went to Cape May and Atlantic Counties, one in three people who visited New Jersey went to either Atlantic or Cape May Counties. Additionally, nearly one in every three dollars spent by visitors in New Jersey, 35.1% of the total tourism spending was generated in Cape May and Atlantic Counties.

In spite of the losses, Cape May County generated the highest dollar amount in total direct tourism spending statewide in 2020, outpacing Atlantic County for the first time. To further put the losses in perspective, the amount of tourism dollars lost in Cape May County was more than the total amount generated in 15 other New Jersey Counties. Let me repeat that, we lost more than 15 of the 21 counties in the state generated in 2020.

Cape May County's 2020 direct tourism spending represented 18.6% of the total tourism dollars spent in New Jersey. Almost one in every five tourism dollars generated in the State was spent in Cape May County. This comes down to an average of $14.9 million spent every day. Interestingly, the amount of State and Local taxes collected in Cape May County increased by 0.2% or $2.3 million. Visitors generated $4.6 billion in state and local taxes, which is equivalent to $1,400 in tax savings for every household in New Jersey.

After a loss of 5,039 direct tourism jobs in 2020, with a total of 23,265 compared to 2019 with 26,981 total jobs, the county saw a rebound of 10.5% in 2021. Direct tourism employment was 28,304 jobs, an increase over 2019 despite the labor shortage. This is a record number of jobs and represents 48.6% of the county's share of employment. The number of total direct and indirect jobs is 36,837 and represents 63.3% of the county's share of jobs.

To give you a better idea of the impact of tourism, simple math indicates that roughly 30%, or 1 in 3 of the winter population of Cape May County is employed in tourism. Statewide, visitor activity directly supported 270,600 jobs in 2021. Comparing this with the direct employment in other industry sectors, tourism would rank as the 9th largest industry in New Jersey. In 2020, tourism ranked 12th, after its 6th ranking in 2019. Tourism supported more than 430,000 jobs when indirect and induced impacts are considered, an increase of nearly 37,000 jobs in 2021. This represents 8.1% of all jobs in the state—or one out of every twelve jobs in New Jersey.

Based on Occupancy Tax reports, released by the New Jersey Treasury, Cape May County recovered from the losses in lodging within one year of the lifting of the shutdown order. In April 2020, the County saw a loss of 99% in Occupancy Tax compared to April 2019. April 2021 Occupancy Tax Collection registered an increase of 23.7% more than 2019. Record months in July and August 2021, generated more than $4 million in Occupancy tax, this amounted to more than any county generated in a single month, let alone, in two consecutive months. This didn't happen without a lot of hard work, passion and a little bit of desperation from the business community.

Occupancy Tax Collection - Record collection rates in July & August 2021

Occupancy Tax is a 5% charge levied on hotel, motel and Bed and Breakfast Inn room rates and serves as a metric to measure overnight stays. Municipalities can add up to 2% to this tax for local programs and projects. Occupancy Tax revenue gives us hard numbers to use to a gauge tourism growth or declines month over month. This report is also a glimpse to measure all tourism sectors such as food and beverage, retail, recreation and transportation. Historically, as lodging goes, so do the other sectors. On average the overnight visitor to Cape May County spends $374 per person, per day. Occupancy tax funds Tourism, the Arts and History with approximately 50% of the revenue collected going to fund those three entities.

Cape May County's 2021, lodging industry surpassed the Occupancy Tax collection rate from 2019, which was a record year by $3,207,625.35. Based on the year-end Occupancy Tax collection report for 2021, the County saw an increase in collection over 2020 of 38.8%, and an increase of 24.5% over 2019. Rental income surpassed 2019 with more than 2.4 billion collected.

Cape May County saw an increase in Occupancy Tax collection in ten of the twelve months in 2021. January and February saw a decline over 2019 but made up for those two months during the balance of the year. July and August were record months with the largest collection rate recorded, outpacing all other counties in New Jersey. A strong fall and early winter saw an increase of nearly 25% over 2019. Signs of recovery started to show in fall 2020 with September and October outpacing 2019.

Second Homes - 47% or 56,400 of all second homes in New Jersey are located in Cape May County

Nearly 50% of all dwellings in Cape May County are considered second or vacation homes. Rental income in 2021 was $2.4 billion. The second home sector is experiencing some changes since COVID that can impact the rental sector. As more second homes are being used as vacation homes and or permanent residences, we will see a reduction in our rental inventory. Record home sales over the past two years have skyrocketed and driven home values up to record numbers. Cape May County is a very desirable location that offers the quality of life that is motivating many to purchase homes and reducing affordable housing for those in the service industry both year-round and seasonal housing is adding to the labor shortage and impacting the tourism industry in other areas.

Top Travel Trends in 2022 - What do they want and where do we fit?

Following travel trends is key to our marketing efforts and was key to our recovery. Once we discover what travelers are looking for in a vacation, we quickly match those trends to what we have to offer as a destination and include those trends in our messaging. We have a big advantage with beach vacations topping the most sought-after travel interests. The diversity of attractions also plays into the interest of travelers. Not many destinations can boast of having beautiful beaches within minutes from world-class birding, outdoor adventures and vineyards.

More often than not, we have most of what is top on the trend list. Snow skiing is not ever going to work for the Jersey Cape, but from a list of 11 Travel Trends for 2020, compiled by CompareCamp, we found seven trends that fit well as we market our assets. As we develop our campaign, we work into our message the trends that appeal to our visitors, and we can deliver.

1. Private Rentals -- More than 47% of the dwellings in Cape May County are second or vacation homes with 53% of them rented through realtors, homeowners, or online booking engines. Realtors reported record rentals and home sales during the pandemic and that trend continues to dominate the tourism story. Online booking engines are a growing part of the rental sector and one that we didn't have much data to measure and evaluate. The tourism department contracted with AirDNA in 2020 and the information was eye opening. Rental properties listed through Airbnb and VRBO have increased 10% over the past year. (2021-6,725 & 2022-7,404)
2. Road Trips vs. Flights -- Cape May County is a drive destination within a 300-mile radius of 30 million people. We are perfectly situated to draw millions of visitors from a tank of gas away.
3. Domestic Travel—For Now -- Airlines have not recovered from the pandemic with international flights struggling with reduced service, canceled or dropped flights and skyrocketing costs. Budget Travel and Road Trips are the buzz words for 2022 vacation planners. Through May 5, 2022, there has been a 14.5% decrease in number of flight passengers versus the same time period in 2019. That is a year-to-date comparison.

4. Rebranding Travel Influencers-- Bloggers were hit hard by the pandemic travel bans and restrictions resulted in fewer trips, they couldn't travel, and neither could their readers. Many were forced to reinvented themselves and focus on domestic travel, close to home getaways and food. Bloggers or Influencers have become trusted third-party resources. We now rely on them as trusted journalists that can help tell our story and spread the word about our destination.

5. Multi-Generational Trips and Vacations-- sometimes referred to as the 3G (3 generation) traveler was gaining in popularity pre-COVID and continues to grow as families are looking for ways to reconnect in 2022 and beyond. Cape May County has been catering to the multi-generation family visitors for many years with 48% of our visitors returning for more than 20 years. Baby boomers are our highest return visitor and have the discretionary income to include children and grandchildren on their vacation to the Jersey Cape. The Skip-Gen (grandparents and grandchildren) traveler is also part of the trend.

6. Off-The-Beaten-Path Tourism -- Beyond our great beaches visitors can find world-class birding and nature trails accessible by walking, hiking and biking. Fishing, kayaking and water sports along with historic attractions, wineries, farmland and open spaces allow visitors to experience many off-the-beaten-path adventures. Camping has grown worldwide and continues to grow well beyond 2022.

7. More Mindful Experiences -- We saw the increased interest of the conscientious traveler prior to COVID-19, and while the environment 'healed' somewhat during the travel restrictions, we will see more travelers who want to preserve the world and keep it as they found it or make it better. Sustainable travel continues to be part of the planning and we will continue to see more travelers concerned about limiting carbon emissions and turning to “green” vacations and wellness retreats. Body, mind and soul vacations are big.

Hitting the Road - The return of the Road Trip

Road trips are high on the list of travel trends again in 2022. Air service continues to be impacted by Covid, fuel costs and cancelations. The pent-up demand to take a vacation continues to loom large over travel planners as they seek ways to make up for two years of travel bans and restrictions. Domestic travel is expected to be strong again in 2022 with international travel struggling to catch up to pre-covid numbers.

For some it's the year of the G.O.A.T. (Greatest of All Trips) and they are going all out to make up for lost vacation time. For others it's the fear of more lockdowns and they want to get in the most memorable vacation if that happens again. Bucket lists are still a thing for not only millennials but baby boomers also checking off their lists.

A new survey by vacation rental platform Vacasa found that 63% of Americans are planning to travel this summer. Three out of four travelers surveyed are going to stick to domestic travel again this year. This is music to our ears since we don't have a commercial airport in Cape May County and limited air service in Atlantic. Transportation is also lacking with limited bus and car rental options.

- ✓ 57% will travel to destinations near the water (Lakes or Beaches)
- ✓ 36% will visit national parks.
- ✓ 20% of travelers are expected to travel for longer than a week during the summer
- ✓ 52% are planning to take long weekend vacations
- ✓ 38% of travelers are planning a summer trip between 5 and 7 days long.
- ✓ 46% of those surveyed indicated they will be traveling during the July 4th weekend.
- ✓ 55% of pet owners said they are planning to travel with their pets.

A new survey conducted for Hilton by Wakefield Research asked 1,000 American adults about their summer vacation plans. More than half (55%) of respondents who are pet owners are planning to travel with their pets this summer, so be ready for Fido being added to the reservation. Pet travelers are looking for amenities that cater to their pets that include dog parks and dog friendly beaches, outdoor eateries and attractions.

While traveling with pets is on the rise, the hottest trend in 2020 is a focus on wellness activities or wellness-centric travel, with 98% of respondents stating wellness/wellbeing is a priority. Experts predict that more than $60 billion will be spent on wellness tourism by 2026. Wellness tourism represents 20% of travelers in 2022 and is growing. Wellness tourism appeals to men and women with 56% female, and 56% married or in a relationship. Also, 48% are aged 36-50, and 25% are aged 51-65, with 17% under age 35. Wellness tourism for pets is a thing. Watch for pet spas and retreats that include checkups, grooming, obedience training, exercise and health care.

Wellness can be an immersive cultural experience and include unplugging from devices, reconnecting with friends and family or just focusing on relaxing, eating well and outdoor experiences. The Skycanner report polled more than 1,000 Americans in April and found that 33% of US travelers are dreaming of taking an "ultimate relaxation" trip in 2022 with another 29% wishing for a "wellness holiday." One way for self-caring is travel; and includes mental, emotional and spiritual well-being. This trend is expected to grow by 21% through 2025. Yoga on the beach and other outdoor exercise activities add to the wellness traveler's wish list.

Digital detox tops the list for wellness travelers. During the lockdowns most spent too much time sitting in front of their devices. A need to disconnect and put some distance between them and their digital devices while on vacation. Outdoor activities include animal encounters, nature emersions, community engagement, alternative medicine and natural healing, physical fitness, work-free escapes, sustainable and authentic travel.

Tied into the road trip vacation is the multigenerational trips with extended families, some who haven't seen each other in two years are planning to get together to rekindle relationships and make new memories. Beach destinations make for perfect gathering places for reunions and celebratory events. From 2019 to 2022 bookings for 6 or more people has increased 57%. While gas costs are rising, the multi-generational road trip is less costly than individual air tickets.

Cape May County experienced the return on the domestic traveler in 2020 and 2021, and with a 96% recovery rate, we will undoubtedly surpass the 2019 record spending. Visitation surpassed 2019 with 10.3 million travelers in 2021. The tank of gas away marketing message will generate more visitors from within a 300-mile radius. What we will see in 2022 is the return of the Canadian visitor. They will bolster our visitor base and increase spending.

Reconnect Canada - Unique to Cape May County is the high number of Canadians from the Province of Quebec that come each summer and represent 7-9% of our July and August visitors. With the border reopening in November 2021, the Department of Tourism started a radio campaign on two French-speaking stations and ran digital banner ads in early December. The initial message was simply that we missed them and welcome them back during the summer months. The campaign was successful and new ads will continue to run through July. The Reconnect Canada campaign will be a two-year campaign that will expand throughout the Province of Quebec and into parts of Ontario.

Got Camping? What's more 'off the beaten path' than camping?

As we work to apply the travel trends into our marketing, we first determine the fit to see if our assets and attractions match the trends. Cape May County's outdoor and nature-based activities reign supreme with direct tourism expenditures in the recreation sector of $661.1 million, outpacing all other counties in the state. Camping is a large part of recreation spending and impacts food & beverage, retail and transportation sectors. Birding, hiking, biking and other nature-based activities go together and fit well within the travel trends of off the beaten path experiences for visitors and serve to extend the traditional summer season.

In April 2020, things were looking very bleak with a decline in Occupancy Tax of 99% and reports of 77% decline in campground rentals due to cancelations. The Canadian-US border was closed with not a glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel. The resurgence in RVing was yet another unintended consequence of COVID-19. Families were looking for safe and outdoor lodging and open space.

Cape May County has the highest concentration of campgrounds in New Jersey and home to 45 campgrounds with 35 public and 10 private. The total number of campsites is 14,771. As the camping dynamic changed over the years, the local campgrounds have made many changes to meet the needs of the new camper. These resorts are not your father's campgrounds!

Campgrounds in the county were developed in the mid-1960s through the early 1970s. They were an idea that came from the Cape May County Cooperative Extension Office and Rutgers. Undocumented history as told by Larry Newbold, who served as the Extension Center director, suggested that many of the early campgrounds were developed around the lakes that were created from mining dirt to build the Garden State Parkway.

Campgrounds were in immediate success drawing visitors from as far as the Province of Quebec in Canada. While updated over the years to keep up with demands, most are full-service resorts that offer expanded amenities to include cabins, rentals and seasonal sites. Tent camping was a huge draw in the early days and in some areas it has made a comeback with more people looking for that rustic back to nature experience.

The term camping has been replaced with Glamping and remains one of the hottest trends worldwide. RVs have come a long way and include all the amenities of home. Park models are mini-homes and available for rent. This trend is here to stay as families have made a huge investment in the past two years in this life style.

As some baby boomers are giving up the RV lifestyle, Gen Xers and Millennials are filling in the void. Family travel looked a little different over the past two years and while 19% of respondents state they didn't travel in 2020 and 2021, other families' favorite experiences included: domestic travel (19%), beach resorts (12%), road trips (11%), international travel (10%), staycations (7%), camping (6%). (American Express Travel - 2022 Global Travel Trends Report)

Despite the rising gas prices, RV camping in 2022 will become even more popular as families look for authentic outdoor experiences. Many are seeking close-to-home campgrounds which bodes well for the Jersey Cape.

Camping and visiting national and state parks continue to trend with reports that most campgrounds and state and national parks are booked for RV camping in 2022, during seasonal weekends and holidays.

The final numbers aren't in yet for 2021, but the RVIA speculates between 567,000 and 587,400 RVs were sold. The study concludes that 2022 will see total sales over 550,000 or more, with some RV types selling better than others. (Camper Smarts /Strategy Titan Survey)

Baby Boomer Travel - Baby Boomers are still dictating most travel trends, and the Tourism Department's visitor survey shows 67% of our visitors in 2021 were between age 54-71. (AARP Annual Survey February 2022)

Baby Boomer travel will continue to make an impact on travel and tourism spending upwards of $157 billion on travel. They control more than 70% of disposable income in the United States and have more time to travel.

Better yet, they saved their travel dollars and 2 out of 3 are planning to spend more on travel in 2022.

- ✓ 69% of all Americans plan to travel more, or the same amount, in 2022 than prior to the pandemic.
- ✓ 60% of all Americans traveled less during COVID-19 than they did before the pandemic began.
- ✓ 82% of Baby Boomers, 75% of Gen-Xers, and 73% of both Gen-Zers and Millennials plan to take between 1 to 5 trips for fun in the coming year.

The largest increase in travel spending is seen among those 70-plus, with additional spending going toward cancelable tickets, rooms and travel insurance.

Spending by age in 2022: (AARP February 2022 Survey)

- ✓ Those under 50 are more budget minded and expect to spend closer to $5,000
- ✓ The 50-plus boomers are planning to outspend those under age 50. In 2022, older adults typically say they are ready to spend $8,369 for vacations and getaways.
- ✓ The 70-plus boomer say they could spend as much as $11,500 on travel.

AARP data collected in February 2022 show that plans to travel internationally have dropped with 50% planning to travel both domestically and abroad, and 76% planning domestic only travel. This may be due to the impact of the omicron variant and/or international conflict.

Most American 50-plus adults plan to take at least one trip in 2022, with some indicating upwards of 3-4 trips, an increase of 13% over 2021. This is perhaps reflecting the rebound in their feeling that travel is safe.

Older travelers are more likely to be traveling domestically. 67% of 50-plus plan on traveling in 2022 (2021: 54% only, avoiding crowded destinations, and taking more road trips than usual. Women are more likely than men to anticipate/plan their 2022 travel.

Staycations remains a popular option in 2022, especially for younger travelers. It is a popular choice among those 18–49 (48%) and those 50–59 (42%), specifically.

From COVID-19 to the Price at the Pumps - how is this impacting the tourism industry?

Historically, we have witnessed the correlation between the cost of gas and the cost of travel. There is no doubt that travel planners are including the increased costs of fuel in the vacation equation. Inflation is impacting every level of spending from groceries, retail and fuel costs. Housing, energy, and food make up nearly two thirds or 63% of the family budget and all three are seeing major increases with no end in sight. Every additional dollar spent for food and filling the tank will impact discretionary spending and it will be especially hard on vacation savings. It's not rocket science; this will result in many being forced to make adjustments in vacation plans. Will they forego their vacation and stay home? Will they plan day trips? Will they reduce their length of stay? Will they cut vacation spending to meet their budget? The answer is YES to all the above.

Skyrocketing inflation means most vacation planners will be looking for ways to economize and the word 'staycation' is one that is popping up in a lot of my searches. Inflation will not impact only one segment of the vacation but all aspects of the experience. Getting there is one part of the vacation cost, lodging, meals, and attractions are lumped into the final price tag for travelers and each component has been affected by inflation with increases being passed on to the consumer. A smaller vacation budget will collide with increased costs and the customer will be caught in the middle. Visitors will be looking at the cost as a whole and if they don't find overall value, they will be forced to cancel. Cost and value are two very different considerations for travel planners, as a business owner, can you provide value?

The Department of Tourism's 2022, "tank of gas away" marketing campaign is a reminder to those 30 million people who live within a 300-mile radius. While the increased fuel costs for road trips are causing some to rethink their plans, it is not fully a game changer. Air travel is becoming unaffordable and when compared to the cost to drive with the family compared to airfare for the family, the road trip becomes a more viable option.

Reports indicate that people are not enjoying the rigors of air travel and are opting to trade flying with driving. This is especially true with many airlines cutting back on service resulting in cancelled and dropped flights, masks or no masks, and safety and security concerns. Air flights were once considered a convenience but that has changed now that they are facing so many challenges, for some it has become a nightmare. Drive vacations are more appealing.

The renewed interest in the road trip is good for Cape May County, as a drive destination within 300 miles of 30 million people. We are expanding our marketing reach within the 300-mile radius and targeting new and return customers through a saturated digital campaign based on interests and other demographic data. With Cooperative Marketing grant dollars awarded by the New Jersey Division of Travel and Tourism we were able to drill down on the past 5 years of data collected through our annual survey to better identify and reach our return customers through digital marketing.

There is no answer yet to the question about how it will actually impact the tourism industry. Inflation continues to rise and no answer is in sight. We don't know if there is a new normal or what that will be. We need to be aware of national and global impacts on travel and be flexible as we navigate through the next few years.

Social Media - a key component to our marketing campaign and continues to play a role in expanding our reach and targeting our customers.

Research indicated more adults were on social media sites while they were home quarantining or working remotely. As U.S. consumers started spending more time at home the increased use of social media followed, in some cases there was a more than 50% increase in consumption. This provided a huge boost to engagement on all platforms, especially for travel planning. Social media continues to be a central component in our daily life after many have returned to in-person work.

The Tourism Department and the Southern Shore DMO never stopped marketing during the lockdowns. We immediately redirected our campaign and increased our social media presence with posts and ads on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and e-newsletters. Print, radio and television continued with a new message designed to keep the region in the forefront of travels waiting to make their vacation plans.

Phase one of the change in our marketing plan was the launch of a confidence campaign to ensure our visitors we would be ready when travel reopened. We wanted them to be aware that the County was following CDC protocols and safety was a top priority. The "Safely Together" campaign was used in the County Commissioner's and Health Department messaging and became integral in the Tourism Department's confidence campaign. Safe travel was and remains a high priority with 74% of respondents to our 2022 Visitors' survey listing it second to relaxation. Health and wellness go hand-in-hand with safety more than ever.

The Tourism Department reacted quickly to the shutdown and turned the campaign around within 24 hours. Images featured open spaces and less crowded attractions showing social distancing. A "Safely Together" video was created in 30-second and 15-second lengths for television and social media. The safety message was strong, and the added tag line was “exciting places - open spaces.”

- ✓ We used social media to reach out to followers with messaging - “We’re here when you are ready” ... We moved to “Better Days are ahead” then “We’re Ready When You Are” messaging when businesses started opening in late June. Today it’s “Exciting Places – Open Spaces.”
- ✓ Social Media messaging was keeping the Jersey Cape in front of our followers and engaged. We used images intended to rekindle memories and encourage making new ones.
- ✓ The increase in adults using social media since the pandemic has risen to between 46% to 51%, depending on the platform.
- ✓ The number of daily Facebook users increased by 42% since March. The Jersey Cape Website CTR is up 36.8%, Facebook engagement is up 1.5K%, Instagram up 100%.
- ✓ Time spent by US adults on social media sites grew by 4 minutes in 2020, to 24 minutes per day, due to the pandemic and strong engagement on messaging services like Facebook Messenger, WhatsApp, and Apple iMessage.

Authentic Travel - The authentic self is the soul made visible. Sarah Ban Breathnach

A growing trend in Cultural Tourism is Authentic Travel. It can mean different things to different people, and many have their own preconceived idea of what is authentic and what is not a real or genuine experience. But for most it means the ability to immerse themselves into the local culture.

Many travelers want to encounter local history and culture and meet the local people to get the authentic feel and experience of being immersed or part of the local culture. Authentic food and drinks and local produce are elements of an authentic experience. The laidback beach lifestyle, country charm and rural areas combine to give visitors the authentic feel they are looking for on vacation. Where else can you be on a beach and within a short drive at a winery?

The Jersey Cape is steeped in authenticity from the mom-and-pop owned hotels, motels, restaurants and shopping to local culture and history. More than Victoriana and Doo Wop, the county offers authentic experiences from farm to table menu offerings and local historic sites. From the boardwalk to a local museum or an historic attraction, the County offers authentic experiences that give visitors a connection with real people and a glimpse of our way of life at the southern tip of New Jersey.

A journalist doing a story about Cape May County suggested it is a 'pure' destination, not controlled, staged or recreated. She added that the lack of chain stores and lodging made us charming. You can tour a restored Victorian home or 1950s retro motel, tour a recreated or reconstructed one that look the same, but most want the authentic feel of the real one.

Some are looking to experience a lifestyle they can't get at home. Is it bird watching, surfing, camping or enjoying local produce and products? It's all of them, Cape May County is the real deal and while every experience is not always exactly how we want it to go, it is real and what makes us authentic and charming. Don't be afraid to suggest authentic experiences to your guests. Talk to them and tell them what the locals do for fun and relaxation.
